

John Byron

Painter

"Painting transcends what the camera can capture by omitting or including, expanding or contracting what is actually there."

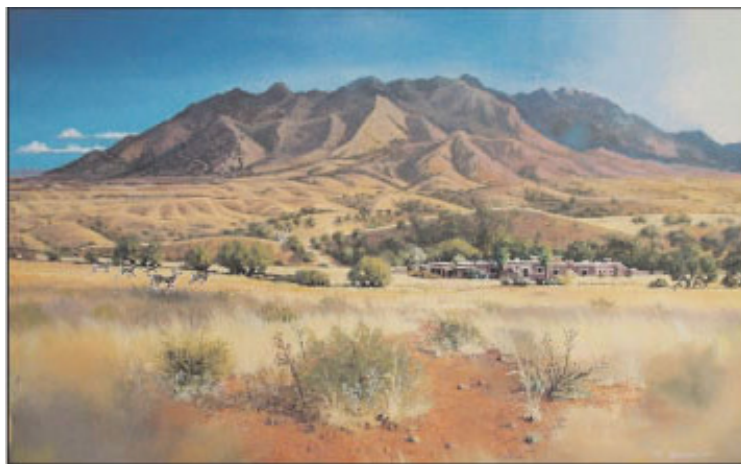

Painting of the artist at work

Painting of the artist's home studio

Painting is my way of expressing the world. My career with over 33 years of painting has included outdoor shows, mall shows and gallery shows. I've operated two galleries of my own. In the seventies, on the mall circuit, I painted every day, focusing on "Lord of the Rings" illustrations. This daily work improved my precision, especially with difficult perspectives.

I work mainly in oils and acrylics. I have done fantasy, portraits, and many landscapes. My recent focus has returned to the subject matter of my surroundings; the Mule Mountains of southeastern Arizona.

Huachuca Mountains (southwest view), 18 x 30 inches, acrylic

520-432-2272. Call for appointment.